A subscription charge will be charged from the end user when a property or building is connected to Telia's communications network. The subscription charge will be charged every time a site is connected. In other words, it also has to be paid if the site has been connected before but is disconnected at the time the order is submitted. The subscription charge will also be invoiced if the customer wants to connect another building on the same property. The subscription charge also includes network construction outside the customer's site, but no more than 100 m from the nearest network access point. In addition to the subscription charge indicated in the price list, Telia is entitled to charge the customer a separate, case-specific construction charge for the portion exceeding the above 100 m. The construction charge is determined by the actual costs, based on the offer made by Telia and accepted by the customer. The customer should check with the tax authority whether the installation-related part of the charge (€ 470) is eligible for a domestic help credit according to current taxation practice
